

CONTAINER FOR PILLS AND DRINK

Abstract

An elongated container, rectangular in cross-section has a single first compartment for holding a drink, at least one second compartment, separate from the first compartment, for holding pills, and caps for separately accessing and sealing each compartment. All the compartments are linearly aligned. The container may have only two compartments, one for holding the drink and the other for holding pills, or it may have 2 or more compartments for holding pills. In the latter case, there are at least three separable sub-containers, a first sub-container for holding a liquid, and at least two second sub-containers, each for holding pills.
